Governor orders flags at half staff in honor of Chief Haverdink

Gov. Gretchen Whitmer has ordered all U.S. and Michigan flags to be lowered to half-staff on Tuesday to honor the late David Haverdink, who died on Christmas after being hit by a vehicle while on duty as the chief of the Hamilton Fire Department (HFD).

Haverdink, 74, was on the scene of a medical incident on M-40 near 136th Avenue in Heath Township around 6 p.m. on Dec. 23 when he was hit by the vehicle, according to HFD. He died at the hospital two days later on Christmas.

All U.S. and Michigan flags within the State Capitol Complex as well as all public buildings and grounds across the state should be lowered, according to Whitmer's office.

"Chief Haverdink was a proud family man and dedicated public servant," Whitmer said. "He was an example of the selflessness and dedication firefighters across Michigan demonstrate each and every day. Let's honor this fallen hero and keep his family and the entire Hamilton Fire Department in our thoughts."

Haverdink was with HFD for 51 years and served as the chief for more than 40 of those years. He also served as sheriff of the Allegan County Sheriff's Office for eight years, firefighters said.

In 1990, Whitmer said he became a member of the Allegan County Board of Commissioners where he advocated for safety initiatives.

"The State of Michigan recognizes the duty, honor, and selfless service of Chief Haverdink by lowering flags to half-staff," Whitmer's office wrote in a news release. "Michigan residents, businesses, schools, local governments, and other organizations also are encouraged to display the flag at half-staff."

Revelers usher in 2026 at Allegan riverfront and elsewhere

By Gari Voss

The traditional welcoming of 2026 in Allegan was designed to accommodate all ages. The celebrations began at the Allegan District Library as the youth, their caregivers, and young-at-heart gathered for fun activities that culminated at high noon with cheers and a special toast.

Beginning at 5pm, the festivities found the adventurous high in the ropes course traversing planks and ropes to hook into the ziplines. Others maneuvered the hand and foot holds to scale the walls that posed a wide range of difficulty. Zipliners even braved the cold and elements to conquer the new tracks of the outdoor Sky Tour. As 9pm arrived, all found their cup of celebration and raised a toast to the New Year.

At 8pm, the Allegan Riverfront Park began stirring with NYE!25. Even with the 20 degree temperatures, the Ice

Dorr Township residents oppose, question potential data center

By Jordan Wilcox
Assistant Publisher

In the latter half of 2024, Microsoft Corporation completed one of the largest single-use land purchases in Dorr Township history, paying approximately $48 million for a 272-acre parcel off 144th Avenue near U.S. 131. The property is prime farmland, sitting just across the street from Walnutdale Family Farms and Frontier Truck Parts.

At the time, Microsoft and its realtor were hesitant to reveal plans for the land. They stated only that the site had been identified "as part of our ongoing search for development opportunities in the Michigan market," and that it "fits into our 10-year tech strategy to develop the Greater Grand Rapids region into a leading tech hub in the Midwest."

Many expected the plan was to build a new solar panel farm, as has been the case with most recent tech-related developments on Allegan County farmland. However, in a December 2025 statement, Microsoft and Lakeshore Advantage, a Holland-based economic development partner for Allegan and Ottawa counties, announced they had been working with local leaders to build a "facility to house a data center."

A data center is a facility that houses computer servers used to store, process and distribute vast amounts of data. From the outside, they resemble large warehouses or fulfillment centers, but inside they contain hundreds of thousands of servers running around the clock, supporting cloud storage for photos, videos and websites, as well as powering artificial intelligence systems capable of tasks such as writing term papers and performing other complex computing functions.

In 2025, data centers became a major topic of discussion in Michigan. Developers and tech companies of all sizes submitted proposals for more than 10 new data centers in rural Michigan townships, most of which were for what are known as "hyperscale" data centers. These facilities often span hundreds of acres and consume as much electricity as a large American city. They can also draw more than 1 million gallons of water daily from local utilities to keep servers cool.

Microsoft's proposal for Dorr Township stated that 128 acres of the property would be developed into a data center, placing it on the cusp of being considered hyperscale.

In each township where a new data center has been proposed, a majority of local residents have expressed opposition. These townships have seen record turnouts at board and planning commission meetings, where dozens of constituents have voiced concerns or questioned the projects.

In Gaines Township, just over the county line in Kent County, more than 300 people attended a December planning commission meeting to oppose another Microsoft data center. However, the meeting was ultimately shut down by the Gaines Township Fire Marshal, as the hall had a maximum occupancy of 250 people.

Meetings in Dorr Township were similarly packed and contentious. More than five dozen residents attended the December 18th township board meeting, raising concerns about what such a large development could mean for the community, including impacts on traffic, electricity, and water supply.

As the meeting continued, the collective sentiment shifted toward urging the township to block Microsoft from building altogether. After several arguments and instances of disorderly behavior, Township Supervisor Jeff Miling told attendees, "We're not going to settle anything here tonight." He said no action could or should be taken until Microsoft submits a formal site plan.

Miling also noted that the township's master plan designates Microsoft's parcel as commercial and industrial, zoning that would allow for a data center. Any attempt to challenge the project in court would likely be unsuccessful, he said, as Microsoft could potentially gain approval "by right."

Regarding residents' questions, one attendee proposed a public meeting between township officials, residents, and Microsoft representatives to explain how the project would function. Former Clerk and Township Planning Commissioner, Brian Boot, spoke in support of such a gathering.

Miling acknowledged that he has met with Microsoft representatives on multiple occasions to learn more about the company's intentions for the property. After the meeting, he reached out again seeking answers to residents' most pressing questions.

Microsoft representative Meredith Lizza responded in writing to Miling's request. While her answers largely reflected information from the company's website, she said she would welcome a meeting to discuss the "Dorr Project" and address community concerns directly.

"As a company, Microsoft has committed to being water positive by 2030," Lizza wrote. "Microsoft will reduce the water we use in our operations in every way we can. We are

FDL celebrates parking lot completion, launches winter reading program

By Art Nicholas

After two years of planning and construction, the Fennville District Library has completed its parking lot and upper porch renovation project, transforming the facility's accessibility and creating new community spaces. The project, which wrapped up in late November, represents a significant milestone for the library and its patrons.

The renovation addressed critical safety and environmental concerns while adding an innovative "upper porch" that provides additional seating and programming space. The project required extensive coordination with community partners, including Fennville Public Schools and Allegan Credit Union, which allowed the library to use their parking lots during construction. Supermercado La Poblanita, a neighboring business, provided staff parking throughout the project.

"We are deeply grateful to our patrons for their patience and support during the construction period," said Teresa Kline, executive director of Fennville District Library. "This project has been a true community effort, and the result is a facility that will serve our patrons better for decades to come."

The library worked with Viridis Design Group throughout the planning and design phases, with architects Tim Britain, Matt Hull, and Allison True creating a design that balanced functionality, aesthetics, and environmental sustainability. Midwest Construction provided the construction services, with Assistant Project Manager Connor Grysen tracking expenses and Project Manager Doug VanDenBeldt overseeing daily operations on site.

City Administrator Katie Beemer played a crucial role in administering the grant funding and navigating regulatory requirements for the project.

Fundraising Push Continues

While the construction is complete, the Friends of the Fennville District Library are working to raise the final $50,000 needed for the project through a creative jigsaw puzzle campaign. Community members can purchase pieces of three different puzzles that, when completed, will display images of the new parking lot and upper porch.

The puzzle pieces are available for purchase at three price points: $10 for a piece of the 1,000-piece puzzle, $50 for a piece of the 500-piece puzzle, and $150 for a piece of the 100-piece puzzle. Patrons can also contribute loose change to a jar at the library, with a puzzle piece added each time donations reach $10.

Winter Reading Challenge Underway

The library launched its 2026 Winter Reading Program on January 5 with a kick-off event featuring bingo games and prizes. Running through March 31, the program challenges participants of all ages to complete a reading bingo card.

Participants select books that fit different category squares on their bingo cards, with the goal of completing a line or the four corners. Ambitious readers can attempt to fill the entire card for an extra challenge. When participants achieve a bingo, they can bring their completed card to the library and enter it into one of five prize raffles.

"The Winter Reading Program is designed to keep our community engaged with reading during the colder months," Kline said. "It's fun for the entire family, and we're excited to see how creative our patrons get with matching books to the different categories."

Bingo cards are available for pickup at the Fennville District Library.

Tool Library Coming in April

In what may be the library's most significant expansion of services, Fennville District Library will open a tool library in early April, made possible by a generous donation. The new service will allow patrons to borrow tools using the same system they currently use for books, DVDs, hotspots, and other materials.

Tool libraries have gained popularity across the country as a way to increase community access to equipment that individuals may only need occasionally. The concept aligns with the library's mission to provide resources that support learning, creativity, and practical skills.

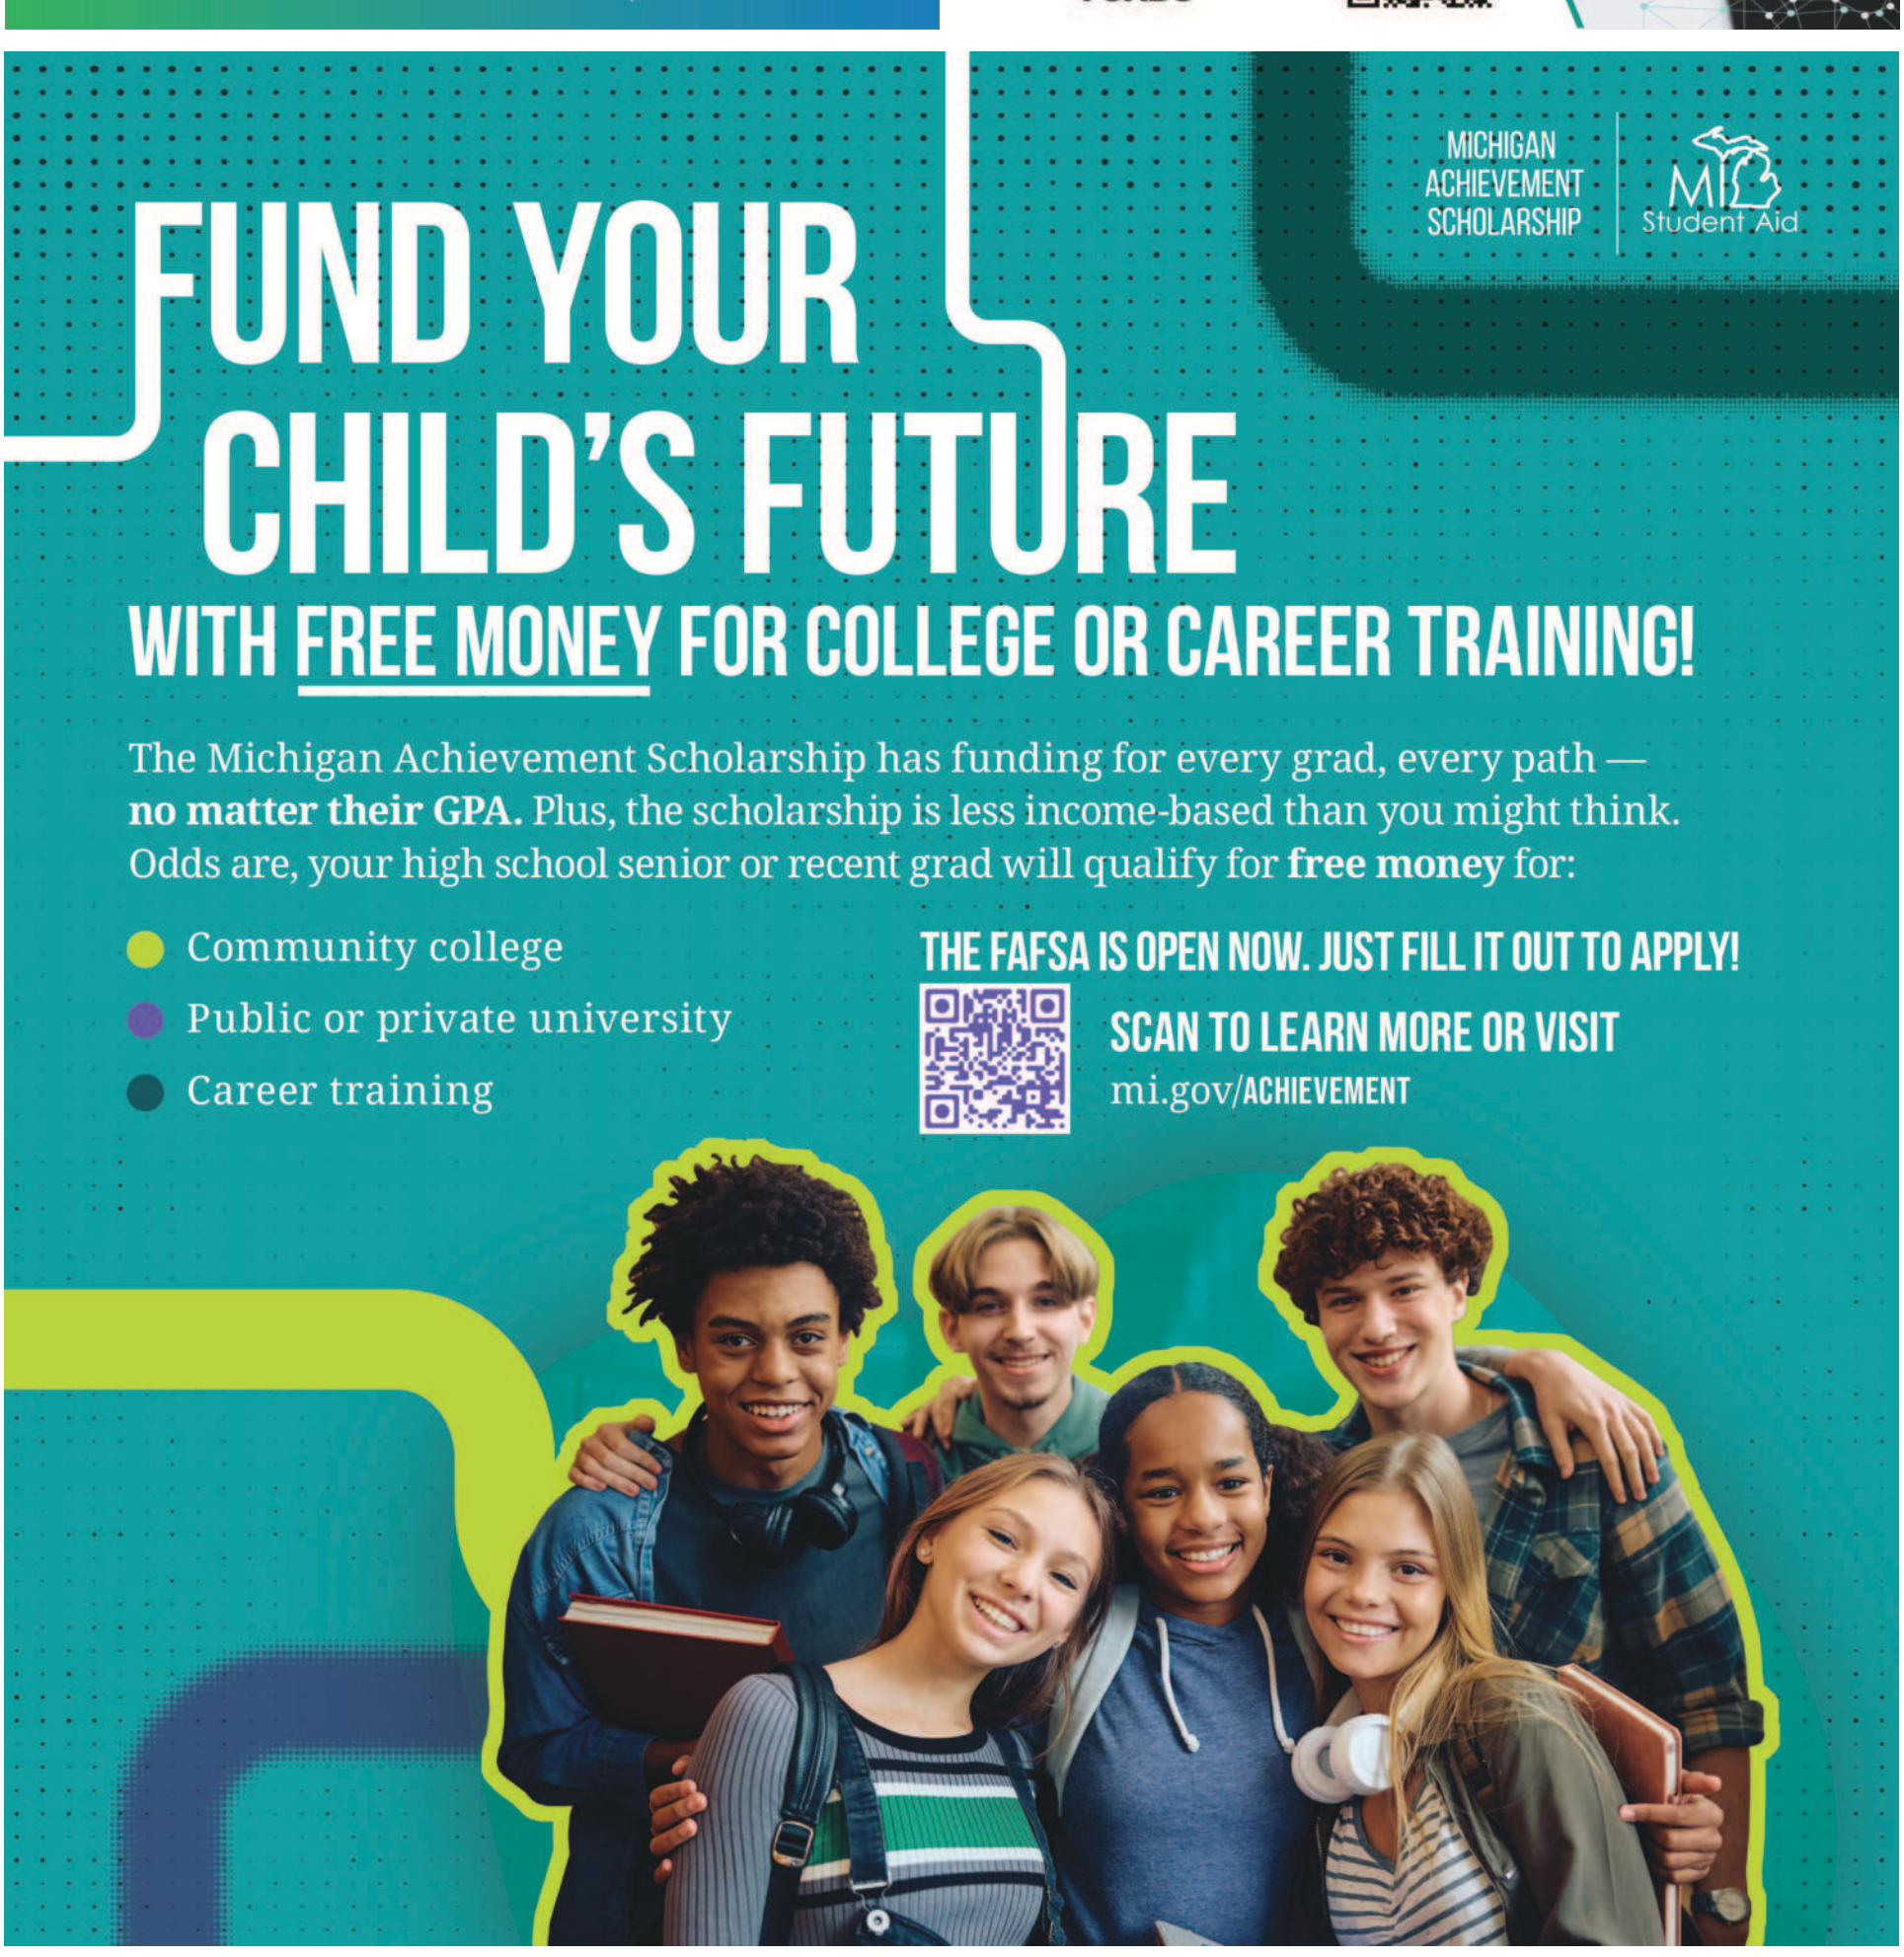
The addition of a tool library represents a significant expansion of what the Fennville District Library offers to the community, moving beyond traditional media to provide hands-on resources for home improvement, crafts, and other projects.

More details about the tool library's collection and borrowing policies will be announced as the April opening date approaches.

Looking Ahead

With the parking lot renovation complete, a robust winter reading program underway, and the tool library opening on the horizon, the Fennville District Library continues to evolve to meet community needs. The library is located at 400 West Main Street in Fennville and serves residents throughout the surrounding area.

For more information about library programs, hours, and services, visit the Fennville District Library or call during regular business hours. (269) 561-5050.



Art of Ink showcased at Allegan District Library

The Art of Ink showcased at the Allegan District Library

By Gari Voss

The Allegan District Library invites all to a special art exhibition. The Art of Ink, a celebration of tattooing, began in December 2025 and will hold a special reception on Monday, January 12, 2026, at 6pm when the public can meet some of Allegan's talented tattoo artists, including Sugar Inksu & Sky Em (Pretty Pink Tingz), Brittany Metz (B Tattoos), and Raven Wynd (Tattoos by Raven). After the Opening Reception, those in attendance can walk to Tantrick Brewing Co. to enjoy complimentary hors d'oeuvres, refreshments and conversation.

Tattooing is one of the most dynamic forms of art in the world. The intricate patterns, designs, and imagery are created on a living canvas, which means that the design must work around the texture and movement of the skin. In addition, the art must meet the personal desires of the person receiving the tattoo.

When Allegan District Library Director Pam Armstrong began considering hosting a tattoo exhibit, she drew on past experiences. "My interest in featuring the 'Art of Ink' at the library was sparked after attending Matt Stebly's 'Bloodlines' exhibition at the Walter Anderson Museum of Art [in Mississippi], plus attending the Peter Anderson Art Festival each year. I deeply appreciate the creativity and skill that artists bring to every tattoo."

Often, a tattoo may begin with the selection of a stencil, but a client may begin the process with a conversation or sharing an image or picture. Therefore, the traditional iconography of hearts, flowers, birds, snakes, skulls, comic figures, dragons and mythological creatures, landscapes, religious subjects, erotica and group insignia of various kinds has been extended and has become quite intricate.

"Tattoos are a major commitment that requires significant trust between the consumer and the artist," explained Armstrong. "While I do not have any tattoos myself, they are one of the most popular art forms in the world today. I realized they had fully entered mainstream society when the Disney Corporation began allowing employees to display visible tattoos."

Tattooing has been traced back prior to 8000 B.C., which ends the Ice Age, and through the centuries, tattoos have been found on the mummified skin of the Egyptian priestess, and in cultures such as the Greeks, Incas, Mayans, Aztecs, Japanese, Polynesians, Maoris, plus early Jews and Christians. Though current populations often attribute tattoos to the lower class or institutionalized, it has truly been the upper classes that have been devoted to what was considered an aura of mystery, idiosyncrasy, adventurousness or exoticism.

The Art of Ink, a display of local tattoo artists, can be viewed on the Community Wall at the Allegan District Library through February 2026. A special reception will be held on Mon., Jan. 12, 2026, at 6pm with a follow-up gathering to be held at Tantrick Brewing Co. following the library meet and greet. Photo: Pamela Armstrrong

Because the contemporary tattooists consider themselves as craftsmen or artists, clients who seek extensive tattoos rely on the tattooist to treat them as a blank canvas. Many of the artists have formal training with interests in painting, sculpture, and performance. The extensive work in a variety of mediums allows tattooists to utilize a variety of techniques and avoid using most of the traditional iconography used in painting, sculpture, drawing, performance, and the other plastic and visual arts.

Marcia Tucker, a writer known for her research into tattooing, explained, "Such artists are changing the nature of contemporary tattooing by virtue of their new and different attitudes toward imagery, technique, source material, clients and the ways in which they see the function of tattooing in general. They have introduced conceptual pieces, pagan elements and non-illustrative designs into the field of traditional tattoo."

Art reviewers believe that contemporary tattooists are changing the view of tattooing and keeping the art from becoming stagnant. Images often incorporate a flavor of folk art and even primitive elements that include arcane symbols and traditional images with pigment, but the modern machines and multiple needles take the creations to new heights.

"Our goal is to bring as many patrons as possible into the library to enjoy our services," shared Armstrong. "As someone who appreciates art in all its forms, I am pleased to include tattooing as an art form at the library."

Special recognition was given by Armstrong, "Chloe Schans, the Adult Programmer and Marketing Coordinator, listened to my ideas and made it happen. It would not have happened without her hard work."

"Step into the world of body art and craftsmanship!" the invitation reads. "Tattooing, once associated with stigma, has evolved into a broadly accepted and desired form of contemporary art. Tattoo artists transform the challenging surface of the body, creating designs that are rich with meaning, expressing identity, remembrance, and heritage."

The Allegan District Library is proud to showcase a breadth of work from some of Allegan County's skilled tattoo artists during the Art of Ink display that will be available on the Community Wall through February 2026.

Last call for Red Barn Playhouse

By Jim Hayden
Correspondent

The final curtain call for a Saugatuck barn that hosted summer plays for almost 50 years is coming in 2026.

The former Red Barn, at 6357 63rd St. northeast of town, is expected to be razed and replaced with an extension of the neighbor event venue.

The Grant Collection LLC opened the adjoining Emerson Lodge, which hosts weddings, corporate events, rehearsal dinners and other celebrations, in January 2025.

The Grant Collection also owns the Ivy House in Saugatuck and Port 393 in Holland.

The Laketown Township site was previously home to Guardian Brewery, which closed in 2024.

The owners of the Emerson Lounge are proposing removing the barn that housed the former theater but keeping the adjoining silo. A new structure will be built for enhancement of the event venue.

"The barn has been determined to be unoccupiable in its current condition and is also past the point of being reasonably salvageable for the intended use," the company wrote in an Oct. 28, 2025, memo to the Laketown Township Zoning Board of Appeals.

On Dec. 17, the ZBA approved a dimensional variance request for the proposed building for reduced setbacks from neighboring property.

Plans for the new structure must still go before the township planning commission. No date for demolition has been set, though spring is possible.

About the Red Barn

The Red Barn Playhouse was founded by James Webster in 1948 in Douglas, according to a May 26, 1988, article in the Commercial Record. In 1953, Webster purchased the current site which was part of the Belvedere Estate. The barn was built in 1921.

"The barn was filled with livestock and corn at the time of purchase," the article said. "By the spring of 1954, however, he had converted it into the present Red Barn and opened it in June of that year."

The theater went through several ownership changes and was at one point enlarged to hold 500 people.

The theater closed in 2002, according to the Saugatuck-Douglas History Center. It was an antique store before becoming the brewery in 2017.

Beautify Pullman seeks support from Lee Township and Allegan Road Commission for safe routes to school

By Gari Voss

Beautify Pullman, a nonprofit group in Pullman, MI, has an amazing track record in making improvements to their community. One issue or need at a time has been identified, and this group of motivated residents has stepped forward to secure funding and put in the sweat equity to ensure that it happens.

At this time, they have a deadline of January 12, 2026, to complete the securing of funds for a Safe Routes to School grant. The final paperwork rides on two groups – the Lee Township Board and the Allegan County Road Commission Board.

In a conversation with Beautify Pullman Board President Debby Laraway, she shared, "Our funding for Safe Routes to School has been increased, but we still have the hurdle of getting the Township to be the Act 51 agency, because the Road Commission is requiring that. We'll be responsible for engineering costs and any overages. We want to ask the Township to guarantee the overages, which will probably none, but if there are any, we'll work to cover them."

When Laraway says that Beautify Pullman will take on the fiscal responsibility beyond what they are asking Lee Township to do, she can just refer to the track record of Beautify Pullman over the last five years.

This group began with nothing in 2020 but the vision to make Pullman a place where residents would be proud. It began with planting flowers, then building concrete flower structures, then hiring an artist to create an historic mural, and install a beautify welcome sign. Onward they went with the Pullman Town Square complete with a pavilion, green space, benches, gazebo, huge wooden train to climb on, musical instruments, and children's wall. Add a Veteran's Memorial with the names of service men and women from the Pullman and Lee Township area with signed, donated paving bricks. But it didn't stop there.

The group needed a place to meet, so they invested in a small house right next to the Town Square. After realizing that residents needed to access the internet, open Wi-Fi was added in the Square. A place to meet is not complete without celebrations, so there are celebrations, a Farmers Market in the summer, evening concerts, holiday celebrations, and the list goes on.

In a recent interview with Henry Wolf, the Office of Rural Prosperity Director of Policy and Grant Programs, Beautify Pullman Treasurer Pat Conway shared why Beautify Pullman had been able to achieve so many of its goals. The success relied on identifying a need, and not on what they knew, but on what they did not know and who they asked for assistance. There was no dwelling on the limitations, but on identifying what they wanted to achieve and finding a way to achieve it.

Wolf reviewed the funding that Beautify Pullman had been able to access to achieve their projects:

$100,000 from corporate and private funding

$50,000 from the Office of Rural Prosperity

$100,00 from the MI Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

$300,000 from the Safe Roads to School Program

$75,000 through Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)

"This is an incredible track record for 5 years," Wolf stated as he got to the meat of the interview. "What was the problem you were try to solve when you applied for an engineering study for a Safe Routes to School grant?"

"The Pullman community makes up most of Lee Township in Allegan County, but it is not a city or village. Although it's not incorporated, we actually have a downtown. We have a major intersection. We have small businesses. We have a school. We have a health clinic. We have a large faith-based afterschool program. We have an active V.F.W. And we have a large park that Beautify Pullman built. But there are only a few sidewalks in Pullman, that don't really go anywhere."

Conway took time to review the process. "In 2022, we applied for a Rural Readiness Grant to investigate what it would take to bring sidewalks to our community. We really need sidewalks because we are on a section of county road that's 20 miles long from the lakeshore almost to the city of Allegan. The road does not have stop signs. We have one major intersection that did not even have a crosswalk, but it did have a flashing light. Then the Allegan County Road Commission did improve the intersection, but now, there is not even a flashing light anymore. They installed turn lanes that actually have made the traffic more difficult to navigate for someone who is a pedestrian or on a bicycle trying to cross the street."

Looking at the reality, Conway continued, "The community is a poor community with almost a quarter of the households that do not have access to a vehicle, so out of necessity, they walk and ride bikes everywhere. They go to the grocery store, pick up pizza, get their hair cut, go to the clinic. It is not safe. The school is a block off the main intersection, and every child is eligible for busing because they don't have a safe way to travel. Consider that there are areas where many children live only a quarter mile from school, but they have to be bused because of a lack of sidewalks."

Conway explained, "We decided to investigate sidewalks and bike trails."

That led the group to apply for a Rural Readiness Grant that financed the cost of the study and work plan done by Abonmarche. Now that the study is in hand Wolf queried Conway on what happened after the study was completed.

Since the Abonmarche presentations, the group has been working in earnest with the Michigan Fitness Foundation that administers the Safe Routes to School grant. Thanks to the comprehensive plan created with Abonmarche, about 30% of the estimates are complete. Michigan Fitness can grant up to $300,000."

The original plan laid out by Abonmarche was quite extensive, and Conway explained that the work has taken over a year to refine the route that would have the biggest impact on getting kids to school safely. Michigan Fitness introduced the team to the Technology Alternatives Program, and the Office of Rural Prosperity introduced them to the Michigan Infrastructure Office. It has been a process, but with the final approvals by the Lee Township and the Allegan County Road Commission, Beautify Pullman is ready to begin the next step of seeking bids and beginning the construction of their path to school.

"Beautify Pullman has invested over a half million in the community," stated Conway. "That's pretty spectacular. Most of the funds are through private grants with a few large government grants from the state. People saw that Beautify Pullman was here and making progress. People came onboard and helped. The transportation grant was very important. Through Rural Prosperity, I met someone from Lion Bear Adventures. This group is amazing at helping small communities access resources."

Beautify Pullman is not looking to achieve their sidewalk and trail plan all at once, but they do want to begin this first section of the construction. From there, the group will need to address other issues in the community, but for now, they are looking to the Lee Township Board and the Road Commission to acknowledge that Beautify Pullman will be fiscally responsible for the completion of Phase One of the Safe Routes to School.

Wolf and Seth Carlson from the Office of Rural Prosperity asked Conway for advice to other underserved communities. Her response was simple, "If you want to do something but don't know how, get a couple motivated people together and look for opportunities. Join the Rural Readiness Network and get familiar with the office. You don't have to be a municipality but can be a nonprofit."

Now Beautify Pullman must meet their January 12, 2026, deadline.

HEALTHY LIVING TIPS FOR EVERYDAY WELL-BEING

Healthy living is built on consistent habits that support both physical and mental well-being. While major lifestyle changes can feel overwhelming, small, intentional choices made each day often have the greatest long-term impact. From nutrition and movement to rest and balance, healthy living is about sustainability rather than perfection.

Nutrition plays a foundational role in overall health. Focusing on balanced meals that include fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean proteins, and healthy fats helps fuel the body and maintain energy levels. Staying hydrated is equally important, as proper water intake supports digestion, circulation, and concentration. Limiting highly processed foods and added sugars can also reduce the risk of chronic health conditions over time.

Regular physical activity is another key component of a healthy lifestyle. Exercise does not need to be intense or time-consuming to be effective. Activities such as walking, stretching, cycling, or gardening can improve cardiovascular health, strengthen muscles, and boost mood. Health experts recommend finding movement that fits naturally into daily routines, making it easier to maintain consistently.

Sleep is often overlooked but remains essential to good health. Adults generally benefit from seven to nine hours of quality sleep each night. Establishing a regular sleep schedule, limiting screen time before bed, and creating a calm sleep environment can improve both restfulness and daytime alertness. Poor sleep habits are linked to increased stress, weakened immunity, and reduced focus.

Mental and emotional well-being are equally important aspects of healthy living. Managing stress through mindfulness, hobbies, or time outdoors can improve resilience and overall outlook. Staying socially connected with friends, family, or community groups helps combat isolation and supports emotional health. Taking time for rest and reflection allows the body and mind to recharge.

Preventive care also plays a role in maintaining long-term health. Scheduling regular checkups, screenings, and vaccinations helps identify potential concerns early. Listening to the body and addressing issues before they escalate can prevent more serious health problems later on.

Healthy living is not about rigid rules or quick fixes. It is a lifelong approach that adapts to changing needs and circumstances. By prioritizing balanced nutrition, regular movement, adequate rest, and mental well-being, individuals can build habits that support a healthier, more fulfilling life.

Airing the Grievances: The Worst of Washington's Waste

MIKE'S MUSINGS

MIKE WILCOX
■ PUBLISHER ■

Every December, Sen. Rand Paul releases his annual Festivus Report, a nod to the fictional holiday made famous by Seinfeld. The tradition includes an "airing of grievances," and for taxpayers, there is no shortage of them.

I just got the opportunity to read the report, and as usual, I am appalled at the ridiculous items our Congress feels the need to fund.

Paul's report catalogs examples of federal spending that range from eyebrow-raising to downright absurd. While Washington often dismisses these expenditures as trivial, they reflect a deeper problem: a federal government that spends other people's money with little concern for value, accountability, or common sense.

Among the most infamous examples are research grants that seem detached from real-world needs. Taxpayer dollars have been used to study shrimp running on treadmills, whether monkeys prefer gambling to guaranteed rewards, and how stress affects Japanese quail. These projects often cost hundreds of thousands — sometimes millions — of dollars. While scientific research has its place, it is fair to ask why Americans struggling with grocery bills are funding animal experiments with no clear public benefit.

Foreign spending is another frequent offender. Festivus reports have highlighted U.S. tax dollars paying for drag shows in Ecuador, a transsexual comic book in Peru, and gender studies programs in Pakistan. In other cases, money has been spent to promote tourism in foreign countries — essentially asking American taxpayers to subsidize advertising campaigns so people can vacation somewhere else.

Closer to home, federal agencies have managed to waste staggering sums on buildings no one uses. Paul has pointed to millions spent on empty or underutilized office space, including federal buildings that sit mostly vacant while agencies continue paying rent and maintenance. In one instance, a multimillion-dollar parking garage funded by taxpayers saw little to no use after completion.

The military is not immune either. The Department of Defense has repeatedly failed financial audits, unable to account for trillions of dollars in assets. Festivus reports have cited examples such as spare parts being purchased at wildly inflated prices and equipment left unused or abandoned. While service members do their jobs with discipline and sacrifice, the bureaucracy above them often operates without basic financial controls.

Then there are the grants that simply defy explanation. Taxpayers have funded projects studying romantic habits of fish, building museums that never opened, and developing apps that were never used. Once the money is spent, few in Washington seem interested in whether the project succeeded — or even existed.

Defenders of this spending argue that these line items make up a small percentage of the federal budget. That argument misses the point. Waste is not measured only in dollars, but in trust. When citizens see their money used this way, confidence in government erodes.

The Festivus Report resonates because it exposes a pattern: programs that never end, oversight that rarely bites, and a political culture that treats taxpayer dollars as monopoly money. Meanwhile, Americans are told that deficits no longer matter, that higher taxes are unavoidable, and that fiscal restraint is unrealistic.

Before asking taxpayers for more, Washington should prove it can responsibly manage what it already takes. That means fewer shrimp on treadmills, fewer overseas vanity projects, and fewer empty buildings collecting dust on the public dime.

Until then, the airing of grievances will continue — and rightly so.

Life as Performance Art

G CORWIN STOPPEL

When the holiday season began to wind down I checked the little recipe box that contained the names and addresses of people on our Christmas card list.

Every year a few new names are added. Every year a few more names get moved to the back of the box in question mark section. They are people we haven't heard from for a few years despite sending them cards. They got pulled from of the alphabetical section because it is a question whether I'll invest money on them in the future.

I find that discomforting. No doubt some of them passed away over the last few years and no one from their family sent a message with the sad news. To not know what happened to people who once put a tickle on our heart is rough.

I've read that like the big formal Christmas dinner that almost demands getting out the generation's old good China and best silver, caroling from door to door and other traditions, sending and receiving cards is beginning to fade away.

Those who know more about these things than me say it is too time-consuming to hand address the cards, too expensive and much easier to write a letter on the computer, use an AI app to be sure it is free of errors, then send it out en masse. Over and done for another year, and if someone does not respond, we hardly notice it. I am sending and receiving fewer cards than in the past.

As long as I'm coming across as an old curmudgeon, I'll pivot to another gripe: I did not get one paper calendar in the mail. In fact, I didn't find many freebies anywhere.

Finally, I found one at my favorite hardware store, where the woman behind the counter suggested I take two. Apparently, no one else was eager to take them home and she wanted to clear off more horizontal space.

My calendar is right where all good calendars belong. Two magnets are holding it to the side of the refrigerator, just enough out of sight that it might be months before I flip the pages.

In the past, most merchants and businesses handed out calendars as in-the-face reminder to renew your insurance with them, have your car fixed at their service station, and for Roman Catholics nice little icons of a fish on every Friday to not break the rules by settling into a pot roast that night.

Why bother with a paper calendar when your computer or wristwatch will give you the information? The only reason may be it's a tradition.

That, and because I never managed to get one from Danny Lundstrom when he still owned the Oslo Corner Gas, Diner and Grocery Store. He always had calendars of swimsuit-attired Norwegian models touting Norsk Hanson's Prime Lutefisk.

As a youngster I could never figure out why they always wanted to keep their Norsk calendar on a wall in the barn and then save them for decades.

Back to the Christmas cards. Until recently, it bothered me when a year or two lapsed since I last heard from someone. Were they dead? Had their minds drifted away with the fairies and they now resided at Groundhog Day Village where each day is the same as the last because continuity is a good thing?

Even more worrisome was I had said or done something, perhaps of which I was not even aware, and they took a black marker to cross me off their list.

Recently I spent an hour or so talking about this with a wise fellow who asked what I thought about the shepherds who turned up in Bethlehem, or the two fellows walking from Jerusalem to Emmaus on Easter afternoon. "How come we don't know their names?" he asked.

I rattled off the stock answer that the four gospel writers did things differently and were not interested in every little detail.

That answer didn't work with my friend. He explained that in life we have friends in two categories. The bigger category are what he called "friends along the road." The smaller but more important one is the "friends of the heart." That made a lot of sense and I liked his explanation. Then he told me to go for a walk and think about it.

I thought about it for some time. Decades ago when I was in elementary and junior high school, I had a lot of friends of the first category. I wouldn't know most of them if they walked up to me and shook my hand.

I had one friend of the heart and we still stay in contact. In high school it was the same story: even more friends along the road but only a couple of the heart and one of them died last summer.

That pattern has continued from public schools to university to my professional life. People come and go. We move far more often and to more distant places than our predecessors. We change jobs and sometimes careers, leaving behind coworkers.

Just as importantly, we do not seem to place the same value on long-term friendships as in the past. Most of the time it is disappointing, if not painful, when they move on and out of my life. It is also reality.

It is likely some of the people who counted on us being friends of the heart were disappointed when we turned out to be friends along the road.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hopefully Trump has a "Day After" plan

Editor,

About Venezuela.

Keeping oil out of the hands of our enemies is not a bad thing.

So, grabbing Maduro might be a Step One.

That was easy.

But now for the tricky bit.

At this point the concern should be what looks like the lack of a "Day After" plan.

Bush didn't have one after he announced "Mission Accomplished" which led to our involvement in a 20-year war and the birth of ISIS.

And Trump saying, "We're in charge" and "We will run the country" is not a plan and sounds an awful lot like "Nation Building" if not wishful thinking.

We can hope that the connections that would lead to a peaceful resolution were made months ago with people who knew what they were doing and need to be done (as in NOW) before internal resistance can organize. This is how it was done in Panama and Kuwait.

We can hope that Trump has already done this but then again, he's the one who said, "Trade wars are easy to win" and we know how that's working out.

Reader enjoys column on Buddhist monks' trek

Well stated, Mike.

I've never hesitated to speak up (or write) when I've taken exception to Mike Wilcox's columns. My letters of disagreement have often appeared here.

My hat is tipped to him for his January 1 column on the quiet protest of the Buddhist monks and their trek across America for peace.

Indeed, shouting at one another resolves nothing. Talking and especially listening to each other is far more likely to bring about the results that serve us best.

The Breath of the Gods

The Bookworm Sez

"The Breath of the Gods: The History and Future of the Wind"

by Simon Winchester

$35.00 • 389 pages

By Terri Schlichenmeyer

Well, you blew it.

You'd spent all that time making sure your 'do was perfect, not a hair out of place – and then you went outside. The wind took care of your work, making your head look like you'd coiffed it with an eggbeater. It billowed around your body, it stung your face, and in "The Breath of the Gods" by Simon Winchester, you need that to happen again.

Imagine trying to describe wind to a Neanderthal.

It can't be seen, but it's there. It can be heard, but sometimes it can. You can feel it, but you can't touch it. On many days, you don't notice it, and sometimes you can't miss it, like when it's ferocious enough to destroy forests, stir water, and kill. There are places on Earth where it's windy all the time and places where it's hardly ever windy, which is "unsettling."

It's believed that early humans who lived in areas of high, constant wind "tended to flourish," while those who lived in calmer places were worse off, overall. Ancient scientists in larger societies tried to understand wind and could even measure it; the Sumerians named different kinds of it as did the Chinese. Other cultures had their own names for the winds they felt, and those words entered lexicons and literature.

Still, Winchester says, "only wind's consequences are visible, not the wind itself."

Wind can carry smoke from hundreds of miles away, and it can carry deadly radiation over continents. It's the only way some plants can spread seeds. Wind can destroy, it can be put to work, and it needs constant watching because it changes. It can ruin broadcasts, make music both naturally and through instruments, assist flight, heat and cool, move a ship (or help sink it), and change the outcome of a war.

And, says Winchester, on at least one occasion, wind moved tons of land from middle America to the east coast, changing the country forever…

Outside, trees sway, snowflakes look like ants scurrying through the air, and the reason for it often goes unheeded. Chances are, in fact, that you don't much think about wind unless it's biting, strong, or remarkable, like a tornado, hurricane, or windchill. But now's the time to read "The Breath of the Gods," and you'll never go outside again without noticing that thing you cannot see.

Just beware: though the book's first few pages are rough-going, they set the tone for a promise. Author Simon Winchester takes readers on a breezy journey from ancient caves to modern meteorological laboratories, in equal parts history and science, with an easy-to-grasp narrative. Promise: you won't be overwhelmed. Instead, you'll find tales that will make you informed, things that could terrify you, and facts that might make your life a little easier.

Armchair meteorologists and weather-watchers will need this book in their laps this week. So will history lovers and readers of offbeat subjects, and if you're concerned about climate change, grab "The Breath of the Gods."

It's a fascinating way to blow some time.

The Bookworm is Terri Schlichenmeyer.

Terri has been reading since she was 3 years old and she never goes anywhere without a book.

Obituaries

Candace Barbara Statler

It is with great sadness we announce the passing of Candace Barbara Statler.

To the world she was just another face or just Candy, but to us she was the foundation of our family, the true glue which held all of us together as one.

Candace, who went by Candy, was born August 8th, 1949 to her parents Dorthy and Gerald Reynolds. She met the love of her life, Charles Statler, in the year of 1984, then married him May 26, 1994. She had the privilege of being a mother to four children; Jennifer Billman (Mathew), Meredith Bacon (Ronny), David Kay (Wendy), and Gerald Kay. She succeeded in motherhood but truly embraced becoming a grandmother in 1991 and loved her grandchildren unconditionally; Kelly Brooks (Lee), Travis Wells (Rachel), Calsey Whitt, Mathew Sheldon, Jared Kay, and Camron

Kay. Candy soon became a great grandmother in 2011 which filled her heart with even more joy and love; Alexis Higgins, Maddison Higgins, Allison Madalinski, Natalee Brooks, Trinity Wells, and Trenton Baker.

Candy was devout Christian who accepted Jesus fully into her heart in 2003. She went to church regularly where she shared her love of Christ with everyone. She enjoyed her daily morning cup of coffee, and you'd know when she was on her way for it by the sound of her slippers against the floor. She enjoyed being out in nature whether fishing or just relaxing in some shade and having a little chat about whatever came across her mind. She was a great chef in the kitchen but her desserts were always the best from her chocolate cakes to her no bake cookies.

In the early morning of December 20, 2025, Candy took her last breath on earth. Her soul gained its wings, she joined hands with her late husband, and entered through Heaven's gates. Although her passing will forever leave an emptiness in all of our hearts, we as a family are happy to know she and her beloved husband, Charlie, are once again together at peace.

Margaret Ann (Lemoin) Leber

Margaret Ann (Lemoin) Leber, age 89, passed peacefully from this life surrounded by her family on December 15th at Briarwood Assisted Living in Allegan, Michigan. Margaret was born on May 16th, 1936 in Allegan to the late Miles and Louise (Davis) Lemoin and was the youngest of their two daughters, joining older sister Mary. She was known to classmates and family as "Nuggie", a nickname from her beloved father who called her his little nugget of gold. Margaret graduated from Allegan High School in 1954 and enjoyed life-long relationships with classmates and had fun memories of playing clarinet in the high school marching band. She married Ron Leber in 1955 and began life on the Leber family farm in Monterey Township. Margaret worked for many years at the ARC of Allegan and enjoyed working with the developmentally disabled. She liked traveling with them on their annual field trips around the Midwest and was beloved by her charges, many of whom called her "Mom". Margaret was the church secretary for decades at the First Presbyterian Church in Allegan and was a constant fixture at church events. She also worked at Alexanders in Allegan and several other gift shops. She was a prolific cook and baker, and was known for her cookies, pies, and especially her cakes. If you are of a certain age in Allegan, chances are you attended a wedding or graduation party that had one of her beautiful cakes. She was a talented counted cross stitcher who won ribbons at the Fair, ceramic artist and instructor, and creator of beautiful hand-made wreaths for the gift shop at her family's Christmas tree farm. Margaret truly enjoyed talking with people, especially children, and took great delight in greeting everyone during tree sale season. She loved her children Rick, Stevie, and Theresa above all else, and had a special relationship with her granddaughter, Sara.

Margaret is survived by her children Rick Leber (Leslie), Theresa Ashley (Mark), granddaughter Sara, special friend Charlie Riess, and nieces and nephews. She is preceded in death by her parents, husband Ron, son Stevie, and sister Mary Gates.

The family will receive friends at Gorden Funeral Residence, Allegan Chapel on Saturday, December 20, 2025 from 10:00 AM to 11:00 AM. A funeral service will begin at 11:00 AM with burial to follow at Poplar Hill Cemetery. Memorial contributions may be made to the ARC of Allegan, 219 Hubbard Street, Allegan, MI 49010.

Joyce Marie (Wright) Turner

Joyce Marie (Wright) Turner of Fennville, MI, went to be with the Lord on December 29, 2025. Joyce was born to her late parents Lloyd and Lillian (Orr) Wright on May 3, 1945, in Dowagiac, MI. After graduating from Fennville High School Class of 1963, Joyce would become a Licensed Practical Nurse through the Borgess Hospital program in Kalamazoo. She started her nursing career at a local nursing home followed by a brief time at Holland Hospital before joining Plainwell Pipp Hospital as a surgical nurse from 1975 – 1993. She went on to finish her nursing career at Holland Hospital from 1993 - 2015, before retiring. Joyce was a Charter Member of the Community Church of Douglas. While she loved to volunteer at the church, she especially loved singing in the church choir where she was a member for years. She also enjoyed working at the annual church Christmas Bazaar knitting and making Christmas decorations and baked goods for all to enjoy. Joyce was the president of the Fennville Band Boosters for a few years while her daughters were in the Fennville High School band. Joyce was also an integral part in organizing the Fennville Goose Festival in its early years. Her personal hobbies involved canning fruit, working in the yard, and baking for her family. Above all else, she loved being a mom and grandma, cherishing family time. There was nothing she liked more than watching her grandsons play baseball on the weekends. She was the best cheerleader for her entire family.

Joyce Marie Turner

She is survived by her children Lisa (Dr. Jon) Walsh, Selena Turner, and Stephanie Turner; sister Sharon Loos; grandchildren Aidan (Jill) Walsh, Lucas Walsh, Connor Walsh, and Liam Walsh; great-granddaughter Addison Marie Walsh; and many well-loved nieces, nephews and cousins.

She is preceded in death by her parents and sister Patricia Rorick, her niece Dawn Leslie and great niece Courtney Rorick.

Joyce's Memorial Service will start at 11:00 AM with an hour's visitation beforehand from 10:00 AM - 11:00 AM on Saturday, January 10, at Chappell Funeral Home, 637 West Main Street, Fennville, MI 49408.

Memorial donations may be made in Joyce's name to Michigan Chapter Folds of Honor P.O. Box 73, Grand Haven, MI 49417.

Pete Curtis

Pete Curtis made his "last call' on Dec. 20, 2025.

Pete was born July 30, 1946, in Jackson and grew up in Pier Cove. After graduating from Fennville High, he spent time at Michigan State University, in the U.S. Army, and earned a degree in Hotel and Restaurant Management from Lansing Community College.

After working in Lexington, Ky., he came back to Saugatuck where he worked and loved life at The Sand Bar Saloon as bartender/manager/booker of bands/doer of whatever needed to be done, for over three decades.

He also found time to have fun with family, proving victorious in the 1986 Pier Cove Croquet Tournament.

Pete was predeceased by father Bob Fox, parents

Pete Curtis

Ann and Ernie Curtis and sister Maripat.

He is survived by sister Betsy Ann Foster (Mike) and brother Ric Curtis (Natalie). Also, nieces and nephews Wil, Mariah, Tom (Stacy), Marc (Arlene), Ann (Troy) and Curtis, and a whole host of Curtis cousins.

Olivia, Reed, Owen and Pierson will miss their "Grunkle" (great uncle) Pete. The extended Sand Bar family will certainly feel his loss as well.

Today's Commercial Record would rival the New York Times in page count if everyone in Saugatuck submitted their favorite Pete story, and all can probably hear Pete's laugh as clearly as if he was still in the room.

For you Wolverine fans, please find it in your heart to cheer for the Spartans basketball team in at least one game this season.

A Celebration of Life will be announced at a later date. Donations may be made in Pete's memory to Wings Home Hospice, 330 Linn Street, Allegan, MI 49010.

Kathy J. Keene

Kathy J. Keene passed away December 28th, 2025, at Butterworth Heart Center in Grand Rapids. Surrounded by her sister Carrie and her Pastor and friends at the age of 67. Kathy J. Austin was born August 2, 1958, in Allegan General Hospital. She was born to Lee & Molly Austin. And later sister to Carrie Austin. All through school she was a model student and her teachers enjoyed her. She was very good at sports, had many friends and hung out with them whenever she could. She was also a musician and played the piano for years, the clarinet in school, and the guitar. In 1976-77 she drove out to Santa Maria, California by herself to live with a girlfriend for about a year. She loved it out there and got a temporary job at a gas station. She loved the sun so much that she even laid out in the fog one day while in Florida visiting our folks. She moved back to Allegan where she continued her relationship with Dennis R. Keene and they got married on October 22, 1977, at the First Congregational Church in Allegan. He was the best thing that ever happened to her. They went on trips out west and had great times together and with friends. They loved mudding and two-tracking in the woods. Dennis was 6' 4" and she was 5' 4". They made quite a couple. They lived in a little cottage on Baseline Lake and then later moved into a trailer in Dumont Creek Estates, Allegan. Unfortunately, two years after they were married Dennis passed away from the Lou Gehrig disease – ALS, the deadliest form of Muscular Dystrophy. Kathy continued her life alone but still had many friends and relatives to keep her busy, along with her 20-year job at L. Perrigo as a team member and then a line leader. After that she worked in various homes for Adult Foster Care. Kathy had her challenges, many ups and downs but she held on. She will be missed by many.

Skating Rink and Silent Disco dance floor began filling with merrymakers. Kudos to the organizers who placed numerous fire cauldrons around the Riverfront. The large fire pits and cauldrons filled with those enjoying food, drink and conversation as they waited for the drop of the largest New Year's Eve Ball in Michigan.

As the midnight hour came into view, groups of revelers could be seen coming out of the downtown apartments and down the sidewalks from every direction around the city. At five minutes to 12, the crowd around the stage increased, as the rock music of Trixy Tang and the half dozen fire cauldrons kept the crowd warm.

With a proper countdown to midnight, the ball dropped over the stage. The crowd had only a brief moment to toast and kiss in the New Year before turning around to watch the bursts of fireworks at the opposite end of the Riverfront.

Special thanks can be given to NYE!25 sponsors, the City of Allegan, Allegan Event & RCI Adventure Products, Abonmarche, Andy's Ace Hardware, Bartz/Rumery Agency Inc, Michigan Gas Utilities, Tantrick Brewing Co, and Waanders Concrete. NYE!26 is already being discussed.

making progress toward improving water use efficiency by 40% from a 2022 baseline across our global owned datacenter operations by 2030. We will also replenish more water than we use into ecosystems around the world."

She also addressed traffic concerns, writing that "unlike distribution warehouses, datacenters do not have around-the-clock truck traffic coming and going, but might receive occasional deliveries of machinery, parts, office supplies and other equipment." With data centers employing approximately 50 people per building across a 24-hour period, she added, parking lot traffic is minimal, with employees arriving and departing on staggered schedules rather than during large shift changes.

In a more recent statement to WOOD-TV News 8, another Microsoft spokesperson said that "project plans, including construction timelines, are yet to be finalized. We continue to work with our local partners and are committed to sharing information when we have it."

Clippers' comeback falls short against Saranac

By Jason Wesseldyk
Sports Editor

MARTIN—A frantic fourth-quarter comeback attempt fell just short for the Martin boys basketball team in its home game with Saranac on Monday, Jan. 5.

Down 41-25 entering the final stanza, the Clippers held a 19-7 scoring edge during the final eight minutes of play to fall by a score of 48-44.

It's a scenario Martin coach Corby Callaway has seen several times thus far this season.

"This has been the story of our season so far," said Callaway, whose team fell to 2-6. "We dig a huge hole in the first half and then fight back in the second."

Despite being disappointed with the result, Callaway was pleased with the grit displayed by his team.

"I'm proud of how we continued to battle when nothing was going right in the first half," he said. "But I've got to find a way to have our guys ready to go from the jump."

Blake Sweeting led the Clippers with 11 points, four steals and four blocks. Ethan Fitzpatrick and Jason Marshall added eight points each, with Marshall also going for four rebounds and four steals.

Jackson Kennedy chipped in with five points, six rebounds and three blocks.

Martin also took part in the Mendon Holiday Tournament.

After dropping a 63-41 decision against Galesburg-Augusta on Tuesday, Dec. 30, the Clippers rebounded to claim the 42-37 victory over Marcellus on Friday, Jan. 2.

In both games, the Clippers were playing a bit shorthanded due to illness

"We showed a lot of grit today," Callaway said after the Marcellus win. "We weren't at full strength, but we battled all day."

Martin trailed 14-6 after one quarter and 23-13 at halftime. But a 13-8 edge in the third quarter helped the Clippers narrow the gap to 31-26 before a 16-6 fourth-quarter run sealed the comeback.

"We kept our composure and executed way better in the second half," Callaway said.

Fitzpatrick scored 18 points to go with five rebounds and three steals. Sweeting had eight points, eight rebounds and three blocks, while Weson Elkins went for seven points, four rebounds, four assists and five steals.

"Ethan did a great job of making baskets when we needed them and Wes did a little bit of everything for us," Callaway said. "Blake almost had a double-double playing limited minutes because of illness.

"It was a great win for us to start the new year."

In the Galesburg-Augusta game, Martin fell behind 24-9 after one quarter and couldn't recover.

"Galesburg is a really good team," Callaway said.

Fitzpatrick shined in the loss with 22 points.

"Ethan carried us on the offensive end tonight," Callaway said.

Caleb Hopkins added six points and a team-best 11 rebounds. Marshall went for five points, four steals and three assists.

"Caleb Hopkins did a great job stepping into a starting spot and having a career high in rebounds," Callaway said. "We've just got to get our turnovers under control if we want to win these types of games."

Martin girls cruise to win over Athens

By Jason Wesseldyk
Sports Editor

MARTIN—Playing for the first time in nearly three weeks, the Martin girls basketball team seemed to be firing on all cylinders when the Clippers traveled to Athens on Monday, Jan. 5.

Led by a game-best 16 points from Anna Jager, Martin cruised to the 45-16 victory.

First-year Clippers coach Eric Zudweg was particularly pleased with his team's play on the defensive end of the floor.

Martin limited Athens to six or fewer points in each of the four quarters.

"Our defense was solid all night and really set the tone for us," Zugweg said.

The Clippers led 13-2 after one quarter, with Alley Bacon and Torryn Harris each scoring four points in the stanza.

The lead stood at 21-8 at halftime and 35-12 at the end of three quarters.

Harris added 12 points in the win, while Bacon and Kayden Jager had seven and six points respectively.

"Overall for our first game in almost three weeks, I thought we looked sharp, played tough on the defensive side of things and shot the ball well from the outside," Zugweg said.

Richie Jordan's legacy lives on across generations

By Jason Wesseldyk
Sports Editor

For generations of sports fans in Allegan County, the name Richie Jordan has meant something special — a standard of athletic excellence that still stands among the best the area has ever seen.

Long before recruiting rankings, social media highlights and year-round specialization, Jordan was redefining what a high school athlete could be at Fennville, earning national recognition and a place in the National High School Hall of Fame.

More than half a century later, the standard he set in Fennville is still being measured—and, in some ways, still being lived through subsequent generations of Jordans.

Jordan's accomplishments at Fennville High School from 1961–65 remain nearly unmatched in Michigan prep history.

A four-sport standout in football, basketball, baseball and track, he earned 16 varsity letters and became a national sensation despite standing just 5-foot-7. He packed gymnasiums, defied expectations and earned the nickname "Fennville Flash" for his ability to dominate games in ways few athletes ever have.

On the basketball court, Jordan's senior season became the stuff of legend. He averaged a Michigan High School Athletic Association record 44.4 points per game—a mark that still stands decades later—and scored 60 points in a regional championship loss that remains one of the most iconic performances in state history.

That season, Jordan's scoring average ranked first nationally among high school players, ahead of future legends such as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Pete Maravich. Yet when Jordan has reflected on that year, the record has never been the first thing he mentions.

Despite the individual accolades, Fennville fell short of a state championship, and Jordan has long said he would have gladly traded the scoring title for a team trophy.

That perspective — valuing team success over personal recognition — became one of the defining traits of his legacy.

Jordan's versatility carried beyond high school. He went on to compete in both basketball and baseball at Michigan State University, including a Big Ten championship season on the basketball court.

After college, a professional baseball opportunity with the Pittsburgh Pirates was cut short by injury, but his connection to athletics never faded.

Eventually, Jordan settled in Florida, where he remained involved in sports as a strength and conditioning coach and mentor at Cardinal Mooney High School. Even away from Michigan, the competitive standard that defined his career remained intact.

That standard carried directly into the next generation through his son, Mick Jordan.

Mick went on to establish an impressive athletic legacy of his own at Cardinal Mooney, becoming the school's all-time leading scorer in boys basketball with 2,069 points during his career from 1994–98.

While his path differed from his father's multi-sport dominance, the same competitive qualities were evident — consistency, toughness and an ability to perform when it mattered most.

Together, Richie and Mick Jordan formed a rare father-son athletic lineage, one built not on momentary success but on sustained excellence across eras and locations.

That lineage has now reached another generation.

Mick's son, Mason Jordan, has carved out his own role on the football field at Cardinal Mooney, where he is a senior wide receiver for a program that has become a perennial state contender. A three-year contributor, Mason was part of a state championship team in 2023 and has continued to be a steady presence in the Cougars' offense.

Over the course of his career, Mason has contributed as a slot receiver, return man and occasional rusher, posting his most productive season this fall with 608 receiving yards and five touchdowns while helping Cardinal Mooney make another deep postseason run.

His role reflects a familiar theme within the Jordan family — versatility, reliability and a team-first mindset.

The Jordan family's athletic reach extends even further. Mason's other grandfather, John Neidert, was a Super Bowl III champion linebacker with the New York Jets.

But for folks in Allegan County, it is Richie Jordan's name—and what it represents—that continues to resonate most strongly.

Great athletic careers often fade as time passes and new names take their place. Records are broken. Memories blur.

Richie Jordan's legacy has endured.

It lives on in record books and Hall of Fame honors, in the accomplishments of his son, and now in the continued presence of the Jordan name on a football field.

The setting may be different, and the era certainly has changed, but the standard established decades ago in Fennville remains unmistakable.

In that sense, the story of Richie Jordan was never confined to one generation. It was built to last.

Hamilton wrestlers have another busy day

By Jason Wesseldyk

DETROIT—The Detroit Catholic Central Invitational on Saturday, Jan. 3, featured some of the best high school wrestlers in the state.

A pair of Hamilton grapplers were included in that group.

Bryce Morrison emerged as the tournament champ at 150 pounds, while Chase Morrison placed third at 126 pounds.

On the way to his title, Bryce Morrison posted wins over three ranked wrestlers: Division 3 No. 14 at 150, Division 1 No. 10 at 157 and Division 1 No. 7 at 150.

For his efforts, he was named Most Outstanding Wrestler for the upper weights.

Chase Morrison also bested three ranked opponents: Division 1 No. 9 at 132, Division 2 No. 10 at 126 and Division 1 No. 7 at 126.

"It was an outstanding effort for those guys," Hamilton coach Trenton Holyfield said.

The rest of the varsity team was at the Three Rivers Duals, with Hamilton finishing at 2-3.

The Hawkeyes best Otsego (40-36) and Lawton (41-24) and fell to Niles (60-21), Three Rivers (73-6) and Middleville (65-18).

"I saw effort, I saw guys fighting through tough positions and stepping on the mat even when they were nervous and competing for their teammates," Holyfield said. "That takes courage. Wins are the reward, but growth is the goal and growth doesn't always show up on the scoreboard right away.

"If we choose to learn from our mistakes instead of letting it beat us down, then it was not a failure. It was fuel."

Top individual performances for Hamilton included Weston Geerlings, who went 4-0 at 113 pounds. Bronden Van Wieren (126), Austin Paskvan (150) AND Tyler Block (165) each went 3-2.

Fennville girls come up just short

By Jason Wesseldyk
Sports Editor

It was a back-and-forth game when the Fennville girls basketball team hosted Delton on Monday, Jan. 5.

Ultimately, the Blackhawks fell short by a 42-40 score.

Amiyah Johnson paced Fennville with 15 points. Veda Seward added nine points and seven rebounds, while Adrian Hicks snagged a team-best 10 rebounds.

Ceeley Howard added seven points.

Fennville led 13-11 after one quarter, trailed 19-17 at halftime and was up 30-27 at the end of three quarters.

Strong start carries Hamilton girls to win

By Jason Wesseldyk

HAMILTON—Following a 16-day hiatus for Christmas break, the Hamilton girls basketball team returned to action on Saturday, Jan. 3.

And a successful return it was, as the Hawkeyes prevailed 56-34.

A fast start keyed the win, as Hamilton led 20-5 after one quarter and 28-12 at halftime.

Brooke Petroelje scored a team-best 17 points in the victory.

Leah Brink and Paige Kleinheksel added eight points, followed by Kelsey Mersman and Sarah Brink with seven points each.

MHSAA postseason attendance remains near 1.4 million

Attendance at Michigan High School Athletic Association postseason tournaments remained near 1.4 million spectators for the third straight school year in 2024-25. An overall attendance record in baseball and several additional all-time bests for specific tournament rounds helped keep totals among the highest in recent history.

In total, MHSAA Tournament events drew 1,397,574 spectators at competitions for which admission is charged. That figure includes all MHSAA-sponsored sports except golf, skiing and tennis, for which single tickets are not sold during postseason play.

The total attendance represented a decrease of 3.6 percent from the 2023-24 school year. Even so, it marked the third-highest overall attendance over the past eight school years.

Attendance at girls postseason events totaled 453,320 spectators during the 2024-25 school year. That figure was a 3.9-percent decrease from the record-setting total in 2023-24 but still ranked second-highest over the last eight years.

Boys postseason attendance totaled 944,254 spectators, a decrease of 3.4 percent from the previous year. Baseball, however, set an overall tournament attendance record with 65,150 spectators.

Baseball also established attendance records at the District level with 38,086 spectators and at the Quarterfinals with 7,517. Attendance increased from the previous year at every round of the baseball postseason.

Overall attendance totals also increased from 2023-24 in ice hockey, team wrestling, gymnastics, boys soccer and girls swimming & diving postseason tournaments. Ice hockey set records at both its Semifinals (7,758 spectators) and Finals (7,857).

Boys soccer established a District-round attendance record with 18,219 spectators. Team wrestling also set a Finals attendance record with 11,604 fans.

Football remained the most-attended MHSAA Tournament sport, drawing 361,139 spectators during the playoff series. That figure represented a decrease of just over a half-percent from the previous year but included the highest Finals turnout (44,535) since the 2019-20 season.

Boys basketball ranked second overall in attendance with 251,668 spectators. It was followed by girls basketball (145,313) and girls volleyball (110,927).

Track & field drew 41,418 spectators, while softball attracted 47,763. Both sports posted their second-highest attendances on record after setting all-time highs during the 2023-24 school year.

Martin leads area schools in multi-sport participation

Martin High School is among the state's leaders in multi-sport participation, according to the Michigan High School Athletic Association's latest Multi-Sport Participation Survey, which shows continued growth statewide during the 2024-25 school year.

The survey, conducted last spring, marked the seventh time the MHSAA has measured multi-sport participation among athletes at its member high schools. Results again showed small but steady growth, continuing a positive trend that has now spanned every year of the study.

The annual survey was inspired by the MHSAA's Task Force on Multi-Sport Participation, which was appointed in 2016 to study early and intense sport specialization — a growing concern related to health and safety at all levels of youth sports. The task force promotes multi-sport participation as a way to help reduce overuse injuries and burnout, which have been linked to chronic injuries and health-related problems later in life.

The 2024-25 Multi-Sport Participation Survey received responses from 82.7 percent of MHSAA member high schools and showed that 45.4 percent of athletes at those schools participated in two or more sports. That figure represents an increase of six-tenths of a percent from the 2023-24 school year. Overall, multi-sport participation has increased every year since the study began, with a combined increase of 2.6 percent since the first survey following the 2017-18 school year.

For the 2024-25 school year, 47.8 percent of male athletes and 42.3 percent of female athletes competed in multiple sports. As in previous years, the percentage of multi-sport athletes remained inversely proportional to school enrollment. Class D schools again posted the highest percentage of multi-sport athletes at 63.1 percent, followed by Class C schools (59.6 percent), Class B schools (49.3 percent) and Class A schools (38.5 percent).

All four enrollment classifications continued to show increases or sustained levels of multi-sport participation. Class A participation rose three-tenths of a percent from the previous year and is now up 2.6 percent from 2017-18 survey results. Class B increased 1.3 percent from 2023-24 and is also up 2.6 percent since the first survey. Class C participation grew two-tenths of a percent from the previous year and sits 4.4 percent higher than in the initial study, while Class D participation remained steady from 2023-24 and has grown five percent over the last seven years.

The MHSAA task force also recommended using the survey to recognize schools that exceed participation norms. Several schools have consistently ranked among the top 10 percent of their respective classes since the survey began.

Battle Creek Harper Creek, Detroit Cody and Grand Rapids Northview have appeared among the top 10 percent of their classes in six of the seven years the survey has been conducted. Decatur, East Grand Rapids, Manton and Warren Michigan Collegiate have each appeared five times, while Detroit Douglass, Parma Western and Lake Leelanau St. Mary have ranked in the top 10 percent four times apiece.

Among the top performers in the 2024-25 survey was Class C school Martin, which ranked second in its class with 89.7 percent of athletes participating in multiple sports.

Jackson Lumen Christi topped Class C at 97.6 percent. Following Martin were Bad Axe (89.3 percent), Cass City (88.6 percent), Center Line Prep Academy (83.6 percent) and Decatur (82.3 percent), as six Class C schools reached at least 80 percent participation for the second straight year.

Across the state, Class A schools were led by Grand Rapids Northview, which posted the highest percentage in the class at 79.4 percent. Macomb L'Anse Creuse North followed at 70 percent, while Detroit Cass Tech (61.4 percent) and Sterling Heights Stevenson (60.7 percent) also reported at least 60 percent participation.

In Class B, Warren Michigan Collegiate paced the field with 91.3 percent of athletes playing multiple sports. Other top Class B programs included Tecumseh (77.7 percent), Yale (76.6 percent), Detroit Cody (71.4 percent), Battle Creek Harper Creek (71.3 percent) and Manistee (70.1 percent).

Watervliet Grace Christian led Class D at 93.8 percent, with Watersmeet (89.7 percent), Lake Leelanau St. Mary (88.2 percent), Detroit Douglass (87.8 percent), Vestaburg (87.7 percent) and Portland St. Patrick (87.3 percent) rounding out the list of top programs.

The full summary report from the Multi-Sport Participation Survey is available on the "Multi-Sports Benefits" page of the MHSAA website.

Douglas man is pickleball champion

Peter Colvin of Douglas and doubles partner Mark Mark Kenworthy of Grand Rapids, who qualified for the U.S. Senior Pickleball Nationals Dec. 5-9 in Daytona Beach by winning the Northern Regionals Doubles Tournament. But they placed just ninth.

"It wasn't the result we had hoped for," said Colvin. "We played hard and had some good wins but lost to a couple very good doubles teams.

"Mark and I both thought we might have been able to beat them on a better day. It was pretty frustrating," he went on.

However, Colvin channeled his frustrations the very next day as he competed for the Legends Age 65-69 National Singles Crown and took them out on his opponents.

Six matches later, he was crowned Skill Level 3.0 Pickleball National Champion.

"What a fun day it was," said Colvin. "One I will always remember.

"Right before the first match, the rain stopped and it became pretty windy," he went on. "I changed my strategy at the last minute to use the wind to my advantage.

"My days playing high school tennis on the courts at Caledonia High School, surrounded then by cornfields, were always windy," Colvin remembered. "I learned how to use the wind to my advantage back then and it came in handy during the Singles Championship.

"I went into 'the zone' on the first point of the first match and stayed in it for the first five matches, winning them all, beating both the first- and second-seeded players in the process.

"With one more match to go, I thought to myself 'Wow, one more win and I will be a national champion!'"

Not so fast. "When the final match started," Colvin continued, "my aggressive opponent literally blew me off the court with his lethal forehand and I got behind quickly. I called a time out and spent the two minutes to think of how I could stop his attacks and turn the match around before it was too late.

"I took some deep breaths to calm down," he recalled the process, "and closed my eyes to visualize my shot patterns, reminding myself to use the wind and to try to stay away from his forehand.

"It was a good time out. I came back on the court and my opponent never got another point.

"When I was a kid," said the newly-crowned pickleball poobah, "practicing my tennis strokes against the big concrete wall, I used to hit the last shot as hard as I could and then put my arms up in the air (like Rocky Balboa) and dance around with nobody watching, saying out loud 'Peter Colvin wins the national championship!'

"Some 60 years later, though no dancing was involved, I got to experience it for real.

"During the medal ceremony, when the tournament director was placing the gold medal around my neck, he quietly said to me 'Peter, for the rest of your life, you will be a national champion.' I got chills."

"After the ceremony, when all the people had left the area, I sat on the podium and took a minute to quietly dedicate the title to my Mom and Dad in heaven, my wife Deb and our two sons, Chris and Cody, all pickleball addicts as well," he said.

Special days abound on January calendar

By Gari Voss

Celebrations are constantly popping up on calendars. Usually, they are over before most people realize that they have arrived. To assist in sorting out what to celebrate and when, make notes from the following. There are some helpful hints that might assist your revelry.

The First Week in January.

National Hangover Day happens on the 1st, but only because it follows the 31st.

New Year's Resolutions Week. To this one includes Diet Resolution Week. [Never fear, these will have been forgotten or placed on a back burner by the second week in January.],

National Silent Record Week. [If you wondered what this was, AI says. "The annual observance from January 1-7, promoting the value of quiet by encouraging people to listen to "silent records"—blank discs that play nothing—or simply enjoy peace and quiet as a break from constant noise, originated from a 1959 idea at the University of Detroit = Declutter your mind.],

Celebration of Life Week. [Ask a Senior Citizen, and they will tell you that the celebration of life happens every day they get up and accomplish one meaningful task, like getting that first cup of coffee or tea.],

Hunt for Happiness Week. [This might go best with those New Year's Resolutions.]

The Second Week in January.

National Pizza Week. [If someone puts this on their Resolution List during the first week in January, it may be the first resolution that is kept through the end of the year.],

Cuckoo Dancing Week. (begins January 11th) [The "Dance of the Cuckoos" was a musical score created by music director Marvin Hatley and later used as the theme song for the Laurel and Hardy films. Simply complete a comical series of movements to their theme song, involving heel-toe steps, sliding, and clapping hands in the air and on legs, mirroring their quirky, child-like energy, emphasizing fun. The music is easy to Google.],

Home Office Safety and Security Week. [Maybe this should just be find the desk, the floor and the shelves week because they are already cluttered with information for filing taxes.],

Universal Letter Writing Week. [This is really finish Christmas Card Week and letting children know that they will not receive their allowance until the Christmas bills are paid.],

National Mocktail Week. [Finally, there is a week to throw a real party and be super creative!].

Plop in Mid-January.

No Name Calling Week. [Can this be practiced every week?],

National Cowboy Poetry Gathering Week. [Maybe this is a good time to pull out those old Will Rogers tapes.].

The Third Week in January.

National Fresh Squeezed Juice Week. [Every orange in Florida voted for this, while the lemons and grapefruits were right behind.],

International Hoof Care Week (begins the 3rd Tuesday). [For those who lack a hoofed animal, the suggestion is to get a pedicure.],

World Kiwanis Week (begins January 21st). [Be sure to thank Kiwanis members who emphasize serving children and communities by organizing service projects, fundraising, and increasing awareness of needs.],

International Snowmobile Safety Week. [If this did not begin with the first significant snowfall, please, emphasize it to your favorite snowmobile riders.],

National Healthy Weight Week. [Why didn't this go with the resolutions during the first week?].

The Fourth Week in January.

Tax Identity Theft Awareness Week. [Take the opportunity to check where all important information regarding you and your important papers and numbers are kept.],

National CRNA Week (Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists). [This is really January 18 –January 24, 2026, but anyone looking at having surgery should consider bringing a box of chocolate to these highly trained professionals.],

National Meat Week. [Even vegetarians and vegans can thank a rancher or farmer or hunter because the biproducts from the animals grow the best vegetables ever.]

Global Crayola Creativity Week. [This is the week that everyone should celebrate! Get out those crayons and the coloring books buried in the kids' rooms and color. Research has found this to be the most calming activity for all ages. For those who have forgotten how to be creative, Crayola has a website with suggested activities.]

In truth, being aware of the many national celebrations can be extremely helpful in building cultural understanding, empathy and community. The weeks not only highlight a variety of traditions, but they raise awareness of issues related to health and social concerns or just encourage fun that can build connections and perspectives.

Picking a topic to celebrate can bring fun to the workplace – give a coloring book page and some crayons to each team member and watch for a smile. Even Pizza Hut knew the power of crayons and placemats that were used by kids and adults alike.

Knowing weeks to promote awareness like Identity Theft or Child Abuse and Neglect or Cancer, and the list goes on, can build knowledge and empathy. Often the weeks are international, and the awareness comes that people around the world suffer from similar ailments and loss.

Faces in the Crowd

By G C Stoppel

The countdown is on, and it will not be long the big glittering ball in Times Square drops and we enter 2026. What are your predictions for the coming year?

-Man near the Fennville hardware store: "I don't know. It's hard to say. Things might get a lot worse; they might get better." Laughs. "That's my prediction. It could go one way or the other."

-Man, same location: "It's a safe bet that prices will keep going up and we're all going to be worse off."

-Woman near the Fennville grocery store: "Unemployment is going to get a lot worse. My son just got laid off and it's getting harder for young folks to find a good job. I don't think it is ALL Trump's fault, but it has a lot to do with AI."

-Couple, same location; Man: "This is the year they're going to find the treasurer on Oak Island." Woman, glares at him, "That's the best you can come up with? Something stupid like that? My prediction is that we're going to discover there's life in outer space, and UFOs are real."

-Young boy and mother near the Allegan Public Library: "I'll get all A-plusses on my report card."

-Woman near the courthouse: "This is the year doctors will find a cure for cancer and Alzheimer's Disease. Well, if not this year, then next. They're going to find it."

-Two men near the courthouse parking lot. First man: "Trump is going to get us into World War three." That led to an immediate and sharp debate between the two. I left them for it.

Peek at the Past

From the pages of The Allegan News and The Allegan County News and Gazette:

Jan. 11, 1951

Buhler Names Louis Johnson Defense Chief: The Allegan county board of supervisors began their January session with the selection of Louis Johnson as defense chief of the county civil defense organization.

Buhler, who was re-elected chairman of the board of supervisors for another term, announced the appointment at the board's January meeting.

Johnson succeeds former defense chief Don M. Gorman, who resigned from the post last fall. Gorman had served as civil defense director for several years.

Johnson, a longtime Allegan resident, has been active in civic affairs and is well known throughout the county. His appointment was met with approval by members of the board.

The civil defense organization is responsible for coordinating emergency preparedness efforts throughout Allegan County, including disaster response planning and cooperation with state and federal agencies.

Tanakas love the 'hills, lakes, scenery … and the people': Kimiyo Tanaka loves Allegan's snow… as long as she can look at it from inside a warm house while eating ice cream.

The rest of the Tanaka family, however, became snowmobile addicts the weeks they were here.

The Tanakas—the Rev. Tomotashi, his wife Kimiyo, and children Erumi, 7, and Toshihiro, 6 — were guests of the Rev. Charles Martin, pastor of the First Church of God, and family for the two weeks surrounding Christmas.

They left Saturday for South Haven and Sunday for their home in Anderson, Ind., where three of the four Tanakas are in college.

The Rev. Tom, as he's called, is an ordained minister in the Church of God and is working on his master's in religious education at Anderson College, a church-affiliated school. He expects to have his degree by June 1976.

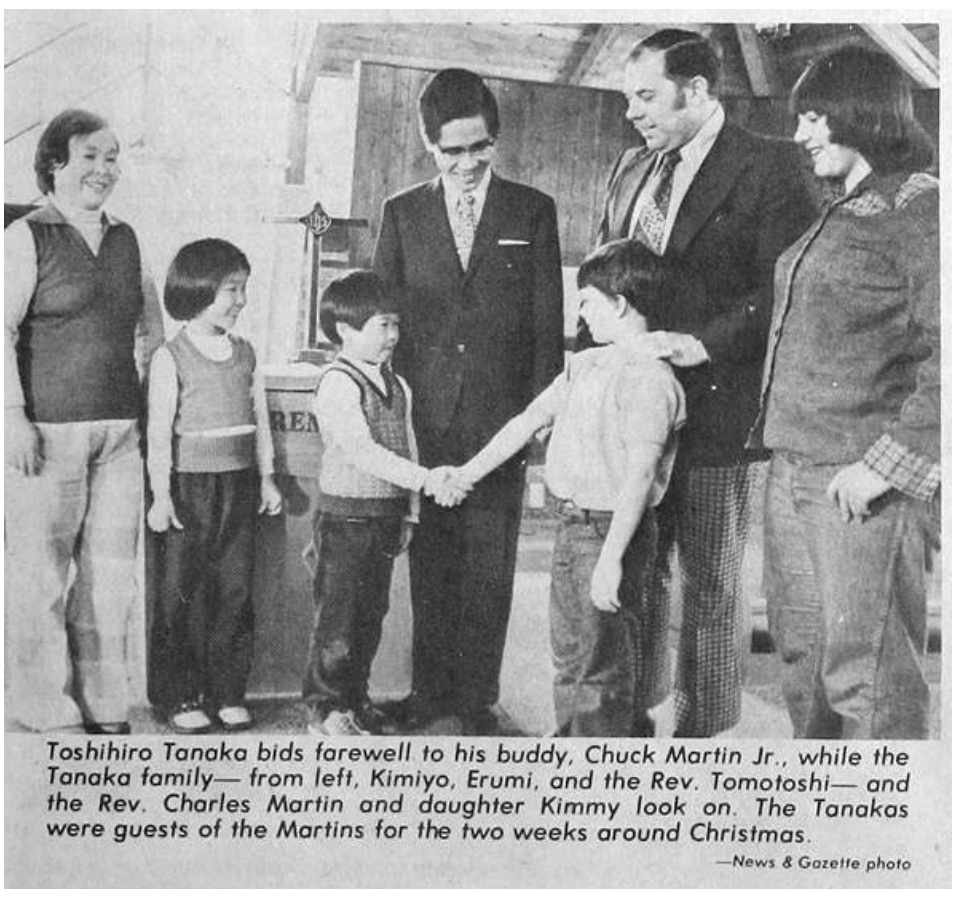
"We came to Allegan to study church music and to rest," Rev. Tom said. "And we got a very good rest."

The Tanakas fell in love with the area.

"The scenery is so beautiful," Kimiyo said. "We love the hills and the lakes."

"And the people," interjected little Erumi.

Rev. Tom was pastor of a Tokyo church for nine years before he decided to come to America and pursue an advanced degree. He hopes to return to a Tokyo church.



Toshihiro Tanaka bids farewell to his buddy, Chuck Martin Jr., while the Tanaka family— from left, Kimiyo, Erumi, and the Rev. Tomotoshi— and the Rev. Charles Martin and daughter Kimmy look on. The Tanakas were guests of the Martins for the two weeks around Christmas.

Jan. 11, 2001

New pastor takes charge of two area churches: As a pastor, the Rev. Alvaro Souza of Gobles is a busy man. His job brings with it far-reaching responsibilities that consume much of his time. Not only does he conduct parishioner visits during the day and in the evenings, but he also must prepare sermons, conduct seminars and oversee numerous church tasks each week.

Souza is the new pastor at both the Gobles and Allegan Seventh Day Adventist churches. His responsibilities encompass ministering to both congregations—with a combined membership of about 335 people—and the church-sponsored Gobles Junior Academy, where 60 students from Allegan and Gobles areas attend school.

"It has its special challenges," Souza said. "It's hard than taking care of one church."

Souza, who turned 50 in October, draws on more than 20 years of experience to make the dual task easier. He has been a pastor since 1977. He was born in Havana, Cuba, and moved to Miami with his family when he was two years old. His family lived in Miami until shortly before moving to Ormond Beach, California, where Souza grew up. He majored in religion at Walla Walla College in Washington. In 1983 he received his master's degree in divinity from Andrews University in Berrien Springs. His experience includes ministering in Oregon as well as Ann Arbor. Then for four months ago, he replaced the Rev. Ken Mitchell as pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Gobles and Allegan.

Now that he's begun to get settled here, Souza has made a commitment to visit each member of his new congregations in an effort to get better acquainted. "It helps me to address many things if I know my parishes and their needs," he said. "It helps the church grow."

Jan. 14, 2021

Customers form line as Family Video announces closure: Is the closing of Family Video just another indicator of changes in viewing habits, or is it more related to consumer shopping habits and the need of small business to adjust their models of operation?

On Monday, January 4, 2021, Rachel Eichler of Family Video on Western Avenue received her Manager call from district manager, Brian Ballast. He shared the news that she was to sell out all product including decorations and shelving because the store would be closing within the next couple weeks. These are some words that Ballast delivered to all 12 of his video stores.

Word spread quickly, and by Monday evening and Tuesday morning, lines of customers loaded down with cases of video games and movies waited to check-out. Each had come to the store to try and find items they hoped to purchase before movies and games were picked up by other bargain shoppers.

Eichler shared that the internet and employees hated to see the store close. Many customers expressed disappointment and sadness, not expecting a closing, but not for another 6 months.

The Allegan store may be better than many Family Video stores because it was the only video store in Allegan and the business may have been good because the internet did not have a presence in the home or their area when they started. With the store closed, in-store browsing is discouraged because of COVID-19, Eichler felt that some customers were about to start picking up items.

During this time, other customers discovered streaming. There was hope when Ballast began the "Store" campaign that people would begin coming back. Customers began returning, but not at the previous volume.

RELIGION SECTION

Throughout the four weeks of Advent, Christians are always invited to look at the Old Testament prophets to search and find every verse or part of a verse that foretells the coming of the Messiah. That is a good thing, but I also believe the prophets explain much of what was happening in the Holy Land at that time, and why God sent his son to redeem the world.

A perfect example is Amos who spoke and/or wrote about the grievous social injustices of his era. Today, we turn to him to watch him speak truth to the sometimes very unjust powers that still control our lives. Many Christians eagerly anticipate when that warning will become a fulfilled prophecy.

The last book containing the messages of the prophets is Malachi. We turn the page and instantly we read from the Gospels. Often, without realizing it, we galloped through some four hundred years of history. Completely neglected in this transition is the rise of the Greek empire under Alexander the Great, and soon after, the rise of the Roman Empire. Both Greece and Rome fought long, hard wars against other nations in the Mediterranean Basin, and all of this had a tremendous influence on Israel.

To ignore those four hundred years would be like studying American history up to 1610 when the English settled in Jamestown, Virginia, and a decade later when the Pilgrims landed in Massachusetts. Then, we stop there, turn the page to the next chapter and resume looking at history starting in 2000. We skipped over the American Revolution, westward migration, slavery and the civil war, the Industrial Age, two world wars in the last century, and everything else.

That is no way to study history, and we know it. At best. It tells a very incomplete story. But then, the Bible was never intended to tell a complete history. As Rabbi Robert Marx famously taught, the Old Testament (or, as it is often called today, the Hebrew Bible) is a collection of books that shows how God loved, cared for, and dealt with a bunch of truly dysfunctional people over the centuries.

Here is just one classic challenge when we turn the page from Malachi to Matthew. Before we get very far into the Gospel, we run into some interesting characters such as Pharisees, Scribes, and Sadducees. We are introduced to King Herod and his descendants. We read very briefly in passing, of the Scribes in Ezra, but that is about all. Where then did these different groups rise? How large were they? What was their influence on ancient Israel, and why did they tangle with Jesus? How can we better understand Jesus without knowing something about the other players.

The answers are found in very good and well-written commentaries of the New Testament. My favorite for basic information is the Daily Bible Series by the late William Barclay. I think the volumes are extremely well done, and still in print decades after his death. Today, it is also available online. From his books you can continue to move on to even more closely detailed studies.

The whole point of this type of reading and study is, of course, to learn more about what was happening in the life of Jesus and the earliest church. In turn, we better understand the message from Jesus about God's love.
